

A switch is the core component of a network - the device that all the computers in a network connect to.